Dean Writing to the Year

Dean Writing to the Year

Dear Alumni,

Greetings from Alumni Hall! Writing this year's letter to you, I am struck by how much our community has grown and how deeply the spirit of Kindy Park University has taken root in the lives of our graduates, wherever they may be in the world.

Last year, the Alumni Association hosted 47 events, from homecoming tailgates to regional dinners to virtual book clubs. We welcomed 1,214 new members into the association, bringing our total membership to just over 9,800 alumni. The generosity that accompanied this growth was remarkable: 312 alumni made their first gift to the Alumni Fund, and the average gift rose by 18 percent. Behind every number is a story, and I want to share a few of the stories that stayed with me this year.

Consider the story of Marcus Tillman, a 1987 graduate who spent his career as a public defender in Cedar Falls. When his firm dissolved its pro bono practice last spring, Marcus and a group of former colleagues formed a new nonprofit to carry the work forward. They asked us if we could host their first fundraiser. We said yes, and 140 people showed up to support a mission that began in our classrooms forty years ago. That is what this association does: it keeps the conversation alive long after the diploma has been framed.

Or consider the story of Priya Nandakumar, a 2019 graduate who built a mobile clinic that now serves three counties in rural Ashwood. Her first grant came from a small alumni-to-alumni fund we created specifically for graduates under thirty who need a little seed money and a lot of encouragement. Today her clinic has served over 4,000 patients. Her story reminds us that the youngest alumni often carry the boldest ideas, and that our job is to make sure they never feel alone in carrying them.

We also lost some of our oldest and most beloved members this year. Professor Emeritus Gerald Whitfield taught at Kindy Park for 41 years and served as faculty advisor to the student newspaper longer than anyone remembered. Dorothy Ann Sellers, the association's first paid staff member, passed away in March at the age of 92. Her desk is now my desk, and I think about her every morning when I open the drawer she left behind. If you knew either of them, we would be grateful for a few lines in their memory.

Looking ahead, the Alumni Association is launching a mentorship program in the fall that will pair recent graduates with alumni in their fields. We are also planning a homecoming weekend in October that will bring back the cohorts of 1974, 1984, 1994, and 2004 for a shared dinner and a walk through the campus they helped build. If you would like to volunteer as a mentor or as a host, please reply to this letter and we will find you a place.

Finally, I want to thank the boards and committees that do the work you never see: the nominating committee, the scholarship committee, the editorial board of the alumni magazine, and the volunteers who call classmates to remind them that we miss them. None of this works without them, and none of it works without you.

With gratitude,

Dr. Kenneth Ramirez, Ph.D.
Dean of Alumni Affairs, '98 Alumnus

P.S. If you haven't updated your address in the last two years, please do so. The magazine is printed twice a year, and we want every issue to find its way home.
